Hartzell received in this district 14,691 votes, 311 more than Tilden, and 65 more than Stewart, the Democratic and Independent candidate for Governor. Wiley, the Republican candiof 387, and yet Wiley was defeated by zell, whose majority of 20 was made Hartzell. These will vote this year for man. In the light of these facts, the man up a tree, sees the pending canvass for Congress in this district, and says to himself: "The Democrats will not nominate a man who can secure the strength of his own party, and win from us two or three hundred votes. They will be likely to nominate some man who will divide their own strength and consolidate ours. And, then, it has been determined by our people that this district shall be redeemed. Money and workers are to be thrown into the district, and a deter- rested. mined fight made for victory. It looks to me as if we had them." The man up a tree-the Radical Zaccheus-is mistaken. The limb of hope on which he is sitting will surely break, and he will fall, and will not see his Lord at all. The Democrats will not be foolish. They will nominate the right man-the man who can win the necessary number of votes from the Radicals, and rally all his own party and not a n o of the Meetingle to his support. They will consider the matter with calmness, and nominate their strongest man. They intend to win. And this the man up a tree will learn to his sorrow.

MISS ASTOR'S CRAZY LOVER.

LICE COURT.

From the New York Sun. Charles Busch was called to the prisoner's bar in the Jefferson market police court yesterday. William B. Astor, accompanied by William Fowler, his butler, went to the complainant's platform. The prisoner was about fifty years old, with grizzled hair and whiskers, and German face. He was dressed in a black frock coat and dark trousers that were shining with grease. A blue and black satin tie held his turn-down collar together. His boots had been freshly black ened, and he carried an old silk hat in his left hand, while he smoothed its surface with his right sleeve. A police officer testified that he arrested Busch on the complaint of Fowler, who charged him with trespassing on the Astor premises, 350 Fifth avenue, Busch was found the previous evening on the steps of the house where he had sat all day, besides annoying the Astor family in other ways.

Mr. Astor explained that Busch was a lunatic, who fancied himself in love with Miss Astor. He had accosted her in the street and written notes to her. He had not signed his name to these epistles, but he had been seen to hide them behind the fence at 350 Fifth avenue. Whenever Miss Astor appeared at a window Busch made grimaces and gestures to her, and ascended the steps to speak to her. This conduct was persistent, and over a year ago he was liberation in the latter part of April he resumed his annoyance. Mr. Astor, therefore wished him incarcerated again, and his daughter could not appear in the street without Busch following and speaking to

In reply to Justice Murray's question, (O.) Gazette speaks, as follows: of the Democratic party will, in such man- Busch acknowledged the truth of the charge, and declared that he had long loved Miss Astor, who, he believed, reciprocated his affection. Justice Murray placed him under $1,000 bail to keep the peace for six months, in default of which he was to go to Blackwell's Island, after submitting to an examination as to his sanity.

Behind the bars of the Jefferson market prison, Busch told the story of his love to a Sun reporter. Four years ago he said. while walking up Fifth avenue in the early evening, he saw Miss Astor in the open window of her father's house. From that moment he loved her. He did not prosecute his suit immediately, and when he did try to speak to her he was sent to an asylum for lunatics. This, he said, was two years ago. Taught prudence by his incarhe ceased his attentions till last March, when he saw Miss Astor in the church of the Transfiguration. When the congregation arose during the service, he fancied that she motioned to him to stand up, and he considered this a sign that she reciprocated his affection. Hence he redoubled his attentions, and wrote notes, which he hid in the turf of the little vard in front of her father's house, telling her that he loved her, and wanted her to be his wife. He did not sign his name, but left her heart to tell her whence they came. Every time he saw her in the street he spoke to her, and lingered about the losse at all hours to catch a single look at her. She had not answered him when he addressed her, and always avoided him: yet he thought she cared for

CINCINNATI, May 30.—Considerable exeitement was created here to-day by the accidental discovery of the body of Hon. J. Scott Harrison, who was buried yesterday in the family vault at North Bend within the past week, and a son of Mr. Harrison, accompanied by a friend, was seeking it today among the medical colleges of this city. It was not known that Mr. Harrison's body had been taken until his son recognized it in the rooms of the Ohio Medical college. The janitor of the college was ar-

It seems that a young man named Devens died at North Bend last week, and yesterday, while the funeral services at Mr. Harrison's grave were progressing, John Harrison and George Eaton thought they ob served appearances about Devens' grave which were suspicious. After the funeral they caused an examination of the grave to be made and found that it had been robised. Preparations were at once made to prevent a similar desecration of Mr. Harrison's grave, and the coffin was enclosed in a wall of brick, the whole covered with a slab of single heavy stone set in cement. The grave was left open to allow the cement to harden and a watchman placed in charge

Last night these men came to Cincinnati in search for Devin's body. They procured search warrants for all medical colleges, and, accompanied by a detective, they first the rooms of the Ohio A MILLIONAIRE AS COMPLAINANT IN A PO- and were about leaving, where one of their number noticed a rope attached to a windlass was down the chute and evidently had something attached to it. Upon drawing it up the naked body of a man was discovered hanging by the neck with a cloth over the face. As the hair was grat they said it was not Devin's body, and wen about to leave. The dectective suggested that they uncover the face and see who ? was. They immediately recognized M: Harrison, and John Harrison staid with the ody until a coffin was procured and the ody placed therein and removed to the urdertaker's. The janitor was at once a

ANDERSON & COS. CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE COMING.

It is pretty generally understood that the above gigantic concern is wending its way toward our city, and will appear in all its marvelous greatness and brilliancy in our NEW MADRID, MO., midst on Tuesday, June 11th. This show sent to the Ward's Island asylum. After visiting the exhibition in question, the Chillicothe

Anderson & Co.'s great circus and menagerie paid our city a visit vesterday, an presented two of the most enjoyable per formances we have ever witnessed. We have been humbugged so frequently for a few years that it is indeed a treat to visit a really excellent exhibition, such as Anderson & Co.'s. For once in a life-time our people have seen a show that produces each and every figure it advertises and even more. The street parade in the inorning was indeed a brilliant moving panorama of the most gorgeous and superb effects, and as it moved grandly over its route through street after street, the rich and varied scene fairly dazzled the eyes of all beholders. The zoological or animal department was as near perfection as possible, comprising about the largest collection of rare and curious animals that we have seen under one canvass. Here could be viewed with perfect safety the huge terrors of the jungles, and beautiful plumaged birds from the tropies. The circus entertainment was nearly faultless from the grand entree to the finale, There is no scarcity of arenic heroes and heroines connected with this exhibition, as the riding was graceful and daring. The gymnastic exercises were thrilling and beautifully executed, the acrobatic feats were astonishing, and the stud horses, trick ponies, mules, elephants, camels, etc., were among the special good things. The attendance was very large at each performance and everybody seemed delighted.
